

EXHIBIT B: CLAIM CHART

Claim 3 clause	Claim limitation	Cite of Support in August 1999 draft preamble	a method of allowing access to data over a distributed data processing system, comprising:	page 2, line 36 – page 3, line 37
a.	providing an automated infrastructure for the exchange of information between multiple parties;	page 2, line 36 – page 3, line 37; page 4, lines 13-38
b.	providing a trusted server with at least one data warehouse for the storage of said information;	page 22, lines 40-46
c.	associating a price rule with particular data records of said information which establishes a cost of accessing said particular data records, and which controls the access to that data;	page 51, lines 8-41
d.	wherein said price rule enables a data owner associated with said data to specify a different price for different types and amounts of information access;	page 51, lines 8-41
e.	within said trusted server, providing a data processing platform which is accessible to multiple third-party data processing software programs which operate as software agents;	page 2, line 36 – page 3, line 37; page 22, lines 40-46; page 21, lines 21-32
f.	wherein a plurality of seller-side software agents have defined relationships to said price rules and associated data records, and control access to said data records;	page 21, lines 21-32; page 60, line 13 – page 61, line 34; page 53, line 40 – page 55, line 7
g.	wherein a plurality of buyer-side software agents have regulated query access to said data processing platform and may request pricing information from said seller-side software agents;	page 8, lines 15-38; page 60, line 13 – page 61, line 34; page 53, line 40 – page 55, line 7
h.	wherein said plurality of seller-side software agents and said plurality of buyer-side software agents operate as persistent data processing systems which interact with one another repeatedly over time and which thus define a virtual marketplace.	page 2, line 36 – page 3, line 37; page 22, lines 40-46; page 21, lines 21-32; page 53, line 40 – page 55, line 7